

Your Child's Craft Corner

Set up a craft corner your child can return to whenever they want to create.

Helps Your Child Grow

Emotional & Behavioral Self-Regulation

Creating a dedicated craft space helps your child remember where each tool belongs and build the habit of putting materials away.

Steps

- As craft activities become more frequent, a well-organized craft corner can help your child use materials responsibly and put them away.
- Choose one table or area and agree that crafts happen there - not on the bed or dining table - and that food stays elsewhere.
- Sort supplies together. Keep paper in a drawer, crayons and colored pencils in cups, and glue and scissors in a tool box so every item has a home.
- After each activity, invite your child to return the materials they used.
- Once the space has been used for a while, look together for any change that would make it easier to work in and tidy.

Tips

- A consistent, orderly craft corner reduces time spent searching for materials and can help your child work more independently and with fewer distractions.

Observations

- ☐ Follows the craft-corner routines, such as clearing the table after use
- ☐ Works independently on a project in the craft corner
