Helps Your Child Grow

Print and Alphabet Knowledge

Making a greeting card helps your child discover that written content can carry a message and become familiar with parts such as the greeting, wish, signature, and date.

Sense of Identity and Belonging

Turning an idea into a real card for Mom gives your child a concrete result they can identify as something they made.

Steps

- Make a Mother's Day card to express appreciation for Mom.
- Ask your child who the card is for, then write "Dear Mom" together at the top.
- Invite your child to say what they want Mom to know.
- If they suggest something unrelated, such as buying a new toy, gently return to the purpose: "This card is for Mom. What could we write that would make her feel loved?"
- If your child needs an idea, ask about a caring action: "How do you think Mom feels when you give her a hug?"
- Add your child's name and the date so Mom knows who made the card and when.
- Finish with decorations your child chooses.

Tips

- If your child cannot write a word yet, encourage them to use a picture or simple symbol instead. Their card will still be one of a kind.
