

Create a Learning Corner

Create a learning corner your child can organize and care for.

Helps Your Child Grow

Emotional & Behavioral Self-Regulation

Choosing, using, and sorting materials helps your child take responsibility for their creative space and return tools after an activity.

Steps

- As your child's interests grow, set up a small learning and making corner together.
- Divide the space into a few clear areas. One might hold letter cards and books, another number cards, and another paper, markers, paint, and craft materials.
- When your child wants an activity, invite them to choose: "Would you like letters, numbers, drawing, or making something today?" Then let them gather the materials they need.
- Afterward, ask your child to return each item to its place and clean the area they used.
- Adjust what is visible as interests change. If crafts are especially appealing this month, place a few useful craft materials within reach and store less-used choices away.

Tips

- Keep visible materials where your child can safely see and reach them. This makes it easier to choose an activity, gather the tools, and put them back.

Observations

- Selects the materials they need, then cleans up and returns them after use
- Chooses an activity or theme they want to explore
